ARCH TO OPEN TWO NEW GREENFIELD LOCATIONS

TAMARAC, FL- Arch Aluminum & Glass is pleased to announce the further expansion of their company with two new Greenfield locations planned for 2007.

The first Greenfield operation, which would be the 33rd operation overall in the Arch family will be in Rogers, Minnesota- which is approximately 30 minutes North of Minneapolis.

Work has already begun inside a 72,000 square foot facility that will be of the full service variety, offering tempering, insulated, spandrel and the complete line of Arch's architectural aluminum products.

In addition, the new plant will specialize in not only processing softcoat glass but will have state of the art CNC equipment necessary to produce high quality heavy glass for shower doors and partitions.

"We are thrilled to be coming to Minnesota. We've serviced this location from our Wisconsin plant for years, and now with being closer and with new and improved equipment, we will offer so much more for the customer base." Commented Arch Aluminum & Glass President and CEO Leon Silverstein.

Arch expects to open in Rogers mid summer.

The second new location will be in the vicinity of Nashville, Tennessee. At this time, Arch is going through the final steps in closing on its location for their new facility, but expects to be open for business during the 4th quarter of 2007.

The Nashville operation, will follow the same blueprint as above, featuring all of the full service offerings and similar to the traditional Arch model.

According to Silverstein; "Like Minnesota, we have been servicing the Nashville region from our other locations so opening there will help us better serve that market."
