Best of 2008 Awards highlights four projects with Wausau's windows and curtainwalls

Wausau, Wis. -- Wausau Window and Wall Systems provided window, door and curtainwall products for four projects selected as McGraw-Hill Construction's annual Best of 2008 award-winning projects including:

* Gateway Medical Center Replacement Facility, Clarksville, Tenn.; selected in the health care category

* Optima at Camelview Village, Scottsdale; Ariz.; selected in the landscape and urban design category

* Research Complex 2, Aurora, Colo.; selected in the health care category

* Riverpoint Center for Apollo Group, Phoenix; selected in the office building category

Representing the best of design and construction from 14 regions across the U.S., these projects will vie for top national awards in 20 categories. A panel of judges will select the "best of the best" using criteria such as teamwork, design excellence, craftsmanship and innovation.

"Wausau's products have long been represented on the best buildings and award-winning projects across the U.S.," says Steve Fronek, Wausau's vice president and leader of its technical services team. "We're proud to contribute to these high-profile examples of outstanding architecture, engineering, construction, installation and materials."
